Occasionally, also, this jumping out of the carriage has been the cause of breakages of the wheels concerned in rotating the back shaft. Q. What is the influence of the weather on the processes of spinning? A. It is the general experience that warm, moist weather is the very best for the processes of cotton spinning. It is not sufficient to have either heat without moisture or vice versa. Heat is necessary to keep the machinery in the best working condition, while it also softens the waxy portion of the fibres of cotton, and therefore keeps the fibres in a pliable condition. Moisture is necessary in order to prevent the fibres from becoming parched and dry, and to prevent the fibres from being susceptible to the influences of electricity. It is the author s experience that dry, hot summer days, dry, frosty days, and days on which east winds are prevalent are the worst of all for the various processes of cotton spinning. Black, foggy days are also very bad, because they tend to dirty the cotton. Q. Name the highest numbers that have been spun advantageously on the throstle and ring frames, and say why as high a rate of numbers cannot be spun on these frames as on the mule? A. (a) It is probable that a strong yarn of about 30 s may be put down as the limit for the flyer throstle, owing to the strain of pulling the bobbin...
