Not illustrated. 1905 Excerpt: . . . seem one solid mass of complicated mechanism, and a greenhorn wonders how the sweet stuff ever gets through without getting lost. For five or more miles outside of Chino the moist land is so rankly rich that it exhales an cxlor resembling that of a full-fledged city dump. Weeds grow to be almost trees, and it is dangerous to leave your cane sticking in the ground--twill sprout. However, were the writer an agriculturist, he would prefer a little inferior grade of soil, minus the perfume. In the vicinity of this gigantic sweetening concern 7000 acres of beets--not ordinary beets; sugar beets are white--were set out last spring and bought by the company. With the factory as a never failing market, beets are a very profitable crop for Chino ranchmen. One of the several new California beet sugar factories is at Los Alamitos, not far from the town of Santa Anna. It is now in full operation, but when the writer was there the factory was still building, and the new born city that the concern had, magnet like, drawn around itself, was but a few months old. The Los Alamitos factory, in its completion, is probably the finest equipped plant in this country. Its machinery, of the latest pattern, overcomes many of the troubles incident to earlier efforts. It was a typical sample of those pyrotechnical Western settlements that yesterday were a wilderness and today are thriving towns--one of those places where everything is put together...
